

LAME HOOKWORM OR OTHER'S CRIME

Minister Declares Southern Mill Owners Should Erect Monument to Lazy Bug.

LAME OF CHILD LABOR

Minister Adds Earnest Plea to Prevent Change in Present State Law.

Declaring that mill owners of the South should erect a monument to the hookworm because that "microscopic" had in a large measure taken from their shoulders the responsibility of broken down constitutions and debilitated brains of children who made the dividends possible, Rev. H. C. Macmillan, of Seventh Street Christian Church, preached last night against the passage of the proposed amendment to the child labor law now before the General Assembly. The present law provides that no female under more than fourteen shall work in a mill, but the proposed amendment would allow her to work in a mill ten hours a day or more in sixty hours a week. The amendment names the same number of hours for both male and female, but allows the male to work in a mill ten hours a day or more in sixty hours a week. Dr. Macmillan said he had heard it argued that it was an act of benevolence, in that it allowed a child to work a few hours overtime during the week, and to get half holiday Saturday. He thought that benevolence should come from the people, and not from the mill owners. He said that Virginia's already lame laws were made worse by the proposed amendment. But who shall offend one of these little ones which believe in Me, it were better for him that a millstone were hung about his neck and that he be drowned in the depths of the sea.

Gave Dreadful Warning.
The minister said that this was one of the most direct and dreadful warnings in the Bible; it had been strangely neglected in the civilization of America, and the South particularly. A child labor in the sweatshops, mines and factories had become a part of the life of the South. "Something had been done," he admitted, but not nearly enough. He said that the laws, inadequate as they were, were largely unenforced. Quoting statistics, he showed the percentage of mill and mine children who were illiterate, stating that not only were the young brains idle unit for receiving such education as was offered, but the necessity of long hours prevented their taking advantage of educational facilities even if they were physically able mentally to receive them. Dr. Macmillan spoke of his own experiences in examining the work in the mines and declared that it was a little short of a miracle that the result, he said, of the passage of such laws as is proposed in this State, would be to raise up in the United States a generation of degenerates, which is always been the pride and strength of the nation. Another argument, he said, for child labor was that the wages of the child were necessary to supplement the meagre earnings of its parents. To the contrary, he reasoned, because the children were allowed to work at much smaller wages than the adults, they were able to keep their own amounts which might be turned by their parents.

Child labor and the associated charges, he said, went hand-in-hand, children making men unable to take care of themselves except at the simple work they learned in childhood. If a price of automobiles and other luxuries, he said, was a menace to the children of the land, he held that the parents should walk, as many better off, had done before.

OLD MAN ARRESTED

Built Fire to Warm Himself, and Is Charged With Trespass.

Henry Loving, an old white man, crippled with rheumatism, was arrested and locked up in the county jail yesterday morning on the charge of trespass. When found by Policemen Rogers, who brought him to jail, he had built a fire on private property and was trying to warm himself. Loving is said to have been an inmate of the Home for some time, and, being too badly crippled to take care of himself, will probably be turned over to the city authorities this morning.

AMUSEMENTS.

After a season of peaceful retirement, Polk Miller, to the huge delight of his Richmond friends, is on the warpath once more. Armed with a mellow banjo and ably reinforced by Colonel "Tom" Booker, of Amelia County, and the famous "Old South" quartet, he is about to set forth on his tour in this city and end wherever he sees fit. Traveling under the auspices of the Radio City Entertainment Bureau, he will give an opening concert at the Academy of Music on Thursday evening, February 10, and will then tour Southward to all a number of engagements.

As negro dialect entertainers, "the two old Cates" have made a name for themselves, have no superiors in the country, and that they will prove a new and instantly popular theatrical "feature" nobody doubts. They have arranged a typical "Old South" program, with stories, sketches and songs, providing a delightful evening's entertainment. It will be practically the only attraction of its sort now before the public. Seats will be placed on sale at the Academy this morning.

JESUS NEVER LIVED, SAYS PROF. DREWS

Stirs Germany Deeply by Publicly Attacking Basis of Christian Religion.

DRAMATIC SCENE AT MEETING

Woman Supplicates Heaven to Strike Down Heretic—Theologians Meet Him in Debate.

Berlin, February 6.—Berlin has been made the scene of one of the most remarkable theological discussions since the days of Martin Luther. It was provoked by Prof. Arthur Drews, of Karlsruhe, who caused a public sensation by plastering the billboards of the town with posters propounding the startling question, "Did Jesus Christ ever live?"

On Monday night he addressed a huge concourse of people at the Zoological Garden in defense of his theory, and the following night he appeared in the same forum in order, Luther-like, to defend his theses against all comers.

A score of the most eminent theologians of the country responded to the invitation. The debate was carried on with fervor and passion before an audience of over 2,000 persons, who were held spellbound until 3 o'clock the next morning. The last hour was employed by Drews in a final retort to his critics.

His onslaughts on the most cherished tenets of Christian doctrine were so graphic and ruthless that many women in the audience were overcome with emotion and had to be carried from the hall, shrieking hysterically. An intensely dramatic scene was presented by one woman, who stood on a chair and held her arms outstretched in the attitude of supplication to heaven to send down destruction upon the head of the Karlsruhe heretic.

Professor Drews appeared in Berlin under the auspices of the League of Monists, whose position, as their name denotes, is akin to those who express their creed in the formula, "There is no God but God; or, hear, O Israel, the Lord thy God is the one God."

Drews laid down his theories after the classic manner of old-time university disputations. The gist of his position was in a large measure like the mythical theory of David Strauss, which created a sensation fifty years ago. Strauss held that there was verily a historic Christ, but that a vast mass of miracle and supernatural wonders had been woven like wreaths around the head of Jesus. Drews goes further. He alleges that there never was such a person as Jesus of Nazareth.

Baron von Soden, who is professor of theology at the University of Berlin and pastor of the theological church in Berlin, led the onslaught on Drews. He maintained that even if it were firmly proved that no such person as Jesus ever existed, that would hardly injure the heart and core of the Christian religion. Freund doubt that neither heathen, Jewish, nor Christian writers of the apostolic age had ever once questioned the reality of the historic person of Jesus.

It was impossible that their message could have been reconstructed around a myth of a redeeming and dying Son of God.

Other speakers attempted to ridicule Drews out of court by quoting satirical works which had been written, hearing such titles as "Historical Doubts About Napoleon," about Martin Luther and about Frederick the Great.

The discussions have aroused a tremendous interest throughout Germany. The newspapers have been published exclusively of accounts of them, and they have provided the talk of the town, despite the fact that the court season is at its zenith and the public mind is occupied with social gaiety.

CALL ATTACK UNIMPORTANT.

Theologians, Though, Admit Paucity of Historical Evidence.

New York, February 6.—Ecclesiastical authorities in this city were inclined to regard as unimportant the reported attack of Professor Arthur Drews in Berlin upon the doctrine of the historical existence of Christ. While admitting a paucity of actual contemporaneous historical references to the existence of Christ, they declared that the best proof of that existence lay in the fact that the Gospels can be traced back to about 75 A. D., and that the existence of Christ was never doubted even by the most advanced critics until the nineteenth century.

"Even the most advanced German critics like Schmiedel and Neuman have never cast doubt upon the actual existence of Christ," said Dean Wilford Lash Robbins, of the General Theological Seminary of the Protestant Episcopal Church. "There is, of course, an unusual paucity of contemporary reference to Christ by historians of the time, but there is a great deal among the early Church Fathers going back as far as the latter part of the first century. Josephus, a contemporary historian, said very little concerning Christ. I recall one casual reference, which, I believe, was scornful in tone, but his silence on the subject is usually set down as intentional. The best argument that Christ existed is an actual historical person is the fact that it was never doubted by even the most radical critics until the nineteenth century."

COCK CROWS AT LAST, TO DELIGHT OF PARIS

Rostand's Long-Delayed Masterpiece, the "Chantecler," Has Most Brilliant Premiere French Capital Has Ever Seen.

[Special Cable to The Times-Dispatch.] Paris, February 6.—The cock has crowed at last. Rostand's masterpiece, "The Chantecler," was produced to-night with enormous success at the Porte St. Martin Theatre. The house was crowded to the very doors. It was the most brilliant premiere that Paris has ever seen. The women were dressed in gorgeous costumes, as for a ball. They wore bizarre coiffures and superb jewels. Every one was in a perfect fever of excitement when the first cock crowed. The curtain rose to reveal a scene of the most brilliant and beautiful. The cock crowed again, and the house was in a perfect fever of excitement. The curtain rose to reveal a scene of the most brilliant and beautiful. The cock crowed again, and the house was in a perfect fever of excitement.

Masterpiece of Art.
The first scene, in a farmyard, was a masterpiece of scenic art. Wagons, flowers, cats, a bird cage and a hen house were of such gigantic size that all the fowls represented looked to be of only normal size, while the costumes were so exquisitely made that they appeared natural and not like the costumes of the stage. The cock crowed, and the house was in a perfect fever of excitement. The curtain rose to reveal a scene of the most brilliant and beautiful. ## CITIZENS EAGER TO HELP CAUSE

Dr. Buchanan Gratified by Public Attitude Toward Home for Girls.

After an extended trip covering nearly all the larger cities in the State, Rev. James Buchanan, secretary of the Virginia Industrial Home and Training School for Girls, returned to Richmond yesterday and announced that an active campaign has been launched for the purpose of raising $15,000 outside of this city for the support of the institution. Dr. Buchanan reports an enthusiasm in the movement among the Mayors, Judges and chiefs of police in Danville, Norfolk, Newport News, Hampton, Portsmouth, Roanoke and Lynchburg, and is especially encouraged as one who heard him express approval of the enterprise.

It is the idea of the board of directors to secure enough money for the establishment of the home. The Legislature now has before it a bill whereby the State will assume responsibility for its maintenance. Dr. Buchanan, in his tour of the State, was especially struck with the interest shown by citizens, and he says there is not a

Charlotte, N. C., February 6.—It was learned to-day from authoritative sources, though no announcement has yet been made, that a new textile mill for the manufacture of fine goods, which, in completeness and modern equipment, will eclipse anything in this section, will shortly be established at Newell's, this county.

It is understood that the enterprise will be financed by the Dukes, the tobacco magnates, who are also now heavily interested in the Southern Power Company. The new mill will cost $300,000, and will have over 12,000 spindles. It will be on the main line of the Southern Railway and Southern Power Company transmission lines.

This total, according to the leaders in the movement, will bring about the conversion of 750,000 heathen.

It was also announced that the country-wide series of meetings, which will close in Chicago the first week in May, will result in increasing foreign missionary offerings to nearly $40,000,000, more than four times the amount of last year's offerings for the purpose.
